New Logo, Same Support

Our increased marketing efforts have paid off. April's Reach Clinic had more individuals seek services than our previous clinics. Throughout April, members from the leadership team tabled at various community events to spread awareness. Alongside this increased marketing effort, the Reach Clinic Logo was updated.

To support our message of inclusivity, the logo was updated. The updated logo's goal is to underscore our intersectional approach to healthcare for frequently marginalized populations. Addditional marketing materials are in the process of being ordered to help with signage on clinic days. For example, we have ordered flags for outside the clinic and signage that can be placed in Queen City Women's Health Clinic temporarily on REACH Clinic days.

Volunteer For the Next Reach Clinic

From feedback from Queen City Women's Health Clinic Providers and clinic volunteers, we have modified our procedures for clinic days. These improved processes will create more defined roles for volunteers and the need for a full-team. It is our hope, that with these updates, there will be increased usage of volunteers on clinic days as well as a comfortable visit for those seeking services.

To register for our upcoming clinics, please visit this link. We officially have the dates posted for June, July, and August as well:

June 8th
July 13th
August 10th

Ruth's Army Meetings Moving Forward

The leadership team appreciates everyone's patience as we determine the structure of meetings moving forward. As we launched the REACH Clinic, lots of time was devoted to meeting with insurance providers, accountants, and more to ensure that the clinic could be fully operational. Because of this, meetings were forgone to support everyone's ability to prioritize volunteering at the clinic. Now that we have ran the clinic several times and have worked out potential issues, we are excited to focus on the community that Ruth's Army consistently meeting as a group can provide.

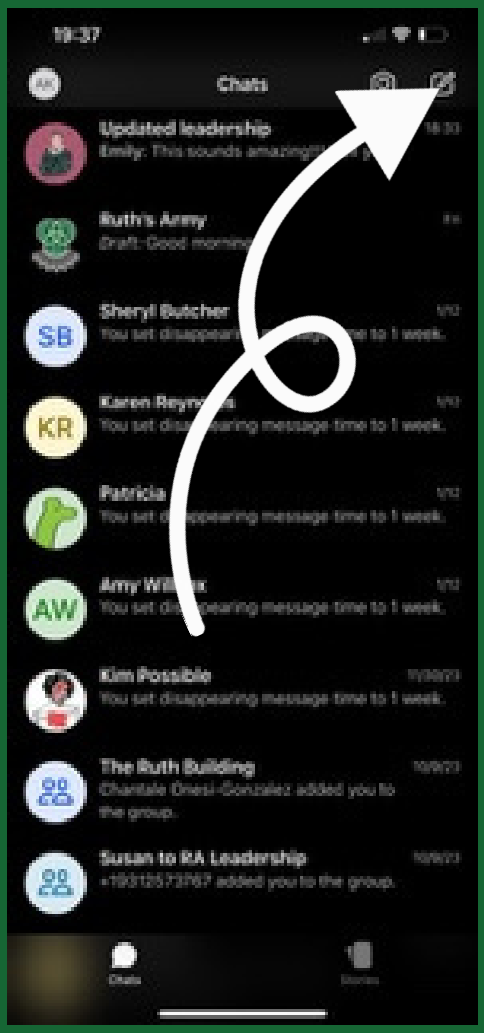

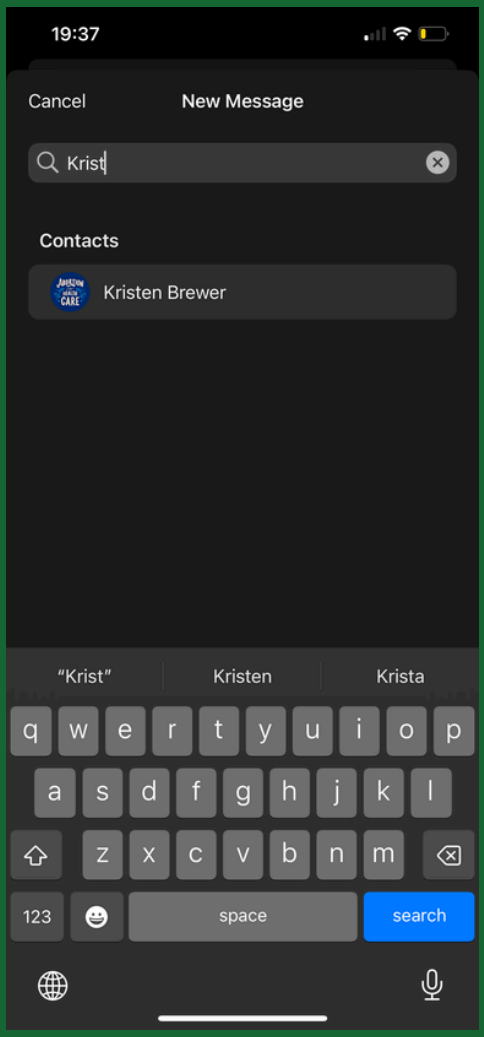

To balance between everyone's busy schedule, especially with it being an election year, meetings will move to a quarterly format with our next meeting taking place June 5th. The location will be announced closest to the date, so stay tuned!

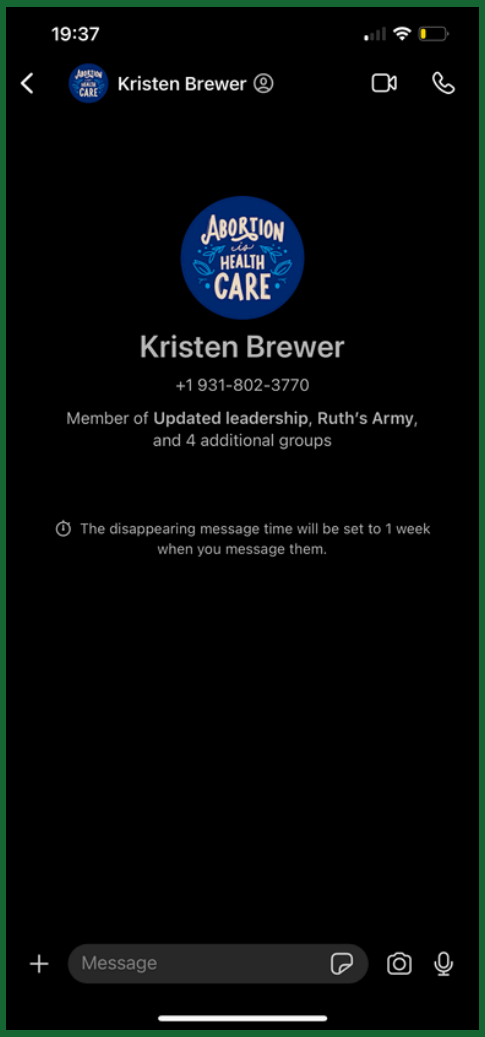

Meetings will occur the first Wednesday of June, September, December, and April.
